

ABSTRACT

A data buffering unit includes a memory that stores data from a data transmitting device. The data buffering unit also includes a memory read manager that prepares data stored in the memory for output prior to receiving a request for the data from a data reading device.